

A Step Ahead: Proposal for an Online Data-base of the Organizations Working with CWSN

Ruchi Shevade*, Tultul Biswas & Nidhi Gulati

Research Associate, Publications, Eklavya Foundation, Madhya Pradesh*

 Coordinator, Teacher Education, Outreach & Advocacy, Eklavya, Madhya Pradesh*

* Assistant Professor, Department of Elementary Education, Institute of Home Economics, University of Delhi*

It started with a suggestion to put together a list of organizations working for children with special needs (hereafter, CWSN). A quick review of the existing platforms such as NGO Darpan, Udaan, Saathire etc, revealed that a well-organized data-base already existed, usually providing, websites of the organizations working for CWSN, contact information, summary of their contribution to the field, accreditations/affiliations, year of establishment etc. These were mostly organised and searchable location-wise/alphabetically/by name of the organization.

As I began having a closer look at websites of these organizations, what caught my attention was the wide range of interventions set-up and offered by these organizations; creating formal and non-formal learning spaces that can cater to the special needs, to equip these spaces by providing required professional support through teacher education, infrastructural facilities, specially designed curriculum, teaching-learning materials etc. Many of them also offered early intervention, assessment of the child, diagnosis of the special need(s), counselling, therapy and professional support to the parents and families.

Some of the organizations created independent learning spaces, while some offered interventions at multiple levels to help existing formal learning spaces i.e, schools to become inclusive spaces, well-equipped to cater to various special needs. In the latter category as well, the interventions varied from preparing children to enter the mainstream education system and supporting those who have already entered the schooling, to help schools to create resource rooms, prepare the teachers and adapt the inclusive approach to education, creating inclusive curricular material etc (Action for Autism, Inclusive Centre for Education, Kilikili, Orkids, Sol's Arc, Sethu, Sarthak Education Trust, Urmi foundation to name a few). The two that I particularly found quite interesting were; the one that aimed at helping CWSN develop social skills and the other was the one that aimed at creating inclusive play spaces.

Based on the varieties at various levels that I learnt about while reviewing these organizations, I would like to suggest some modifications in the existing platforms, to make them more user-friendly. In addition to the facility that allows to search for organizations geography-wise, or alphabetically, if some more searchable categories can be introduced, such as; the types of intervention, disabilities taken care of by the interventions, separate categories for organizations working towards creating inclusive learning spaces etc.

Apart from an exhaustive list of organizations under-preparation, what else this effort left for me was a question cum thought; how if the organizations specialised in different types of interventions come together to develop a replicable model of an inclusive learning space? Will that ensure an exhaustive implementation of the inclusive approach in the formal schooling system? If such models replicated across the states, will that sort of help the current issue of making the learning process accessible, meaningful and engaging for all?
